Dear Friends,

Hope your Holiday was a success. Some of us now have the opportunity to pay the price and lose a few pounds gained during the holiday season.

Our Winter Conference is well planned and ready to begin on January 13 in Little Rock with great speakers, state legislators and an assortment of sessions to help us sharpen our skills. I look forward to seeing everyone at the Statehouse Convention

At the last Executive Committee meeting of 2009, several topics were discussed that you will hear more about in the coming months.

The advisory councils recommended studying a voluntary elected official certification and training program, an idea originally suggested by former League President and current State Rep.

Tommy Baker. One of the benefits of such a program would be to help new officials prepare for legislative audits and a variety of issues that routinely arise. Several sister states have similar programs. The Executive Committee authorized the development of a model program for consideration. UCA's Community Development Institute and UALR's Institute of Economic Advancement will be

Don Zimmerman gave a good report of his discussions with Dan Flowers of the Arkansas Highway and Transportation Department about additional funding for streets and highways. The Association of Counties has agreed to support this proposal that seeks to gain the endorsement from the Blue Ribbon Committee on Highway Finance and the Arkansas Good Roads Council. The discussions have centered on about $20 million of state funding with local match provisions. The Executive Committee approved moving forward with this project.

The Executive Committee approved continuing our support of the Clinton School of Public Service with a $10,000 scholarship to be awarded to an Arkansas resident.

It is time to start planning for the National League of Cities Congressional Cities Conference in Washington, D.C., in March. This is always an excellent opportunity to meet face to face with our Arkansas congressional delegation and discuss relevant issues that need their support. They maintain busy schedules, but last year all six addressed our luncheon and at one point, we were fortunate enough to have five members in the room simultaneously—what a pleasure. We appreciate their work on behalf of our cities, towns and citizens.

The 2010 US Census is just around the corner, and its accuracy is important to all of us. One resource to help prepare is www.2010Census.gov. Check it out.

This past year has been challenging for everyone. I'm sure we all encountered days when progress seemed to have eluded us, but Robert Louis Stevenson has an interesting perspective that I pass along: "Don't judge each day by the harvest you reap, but by the seeds you plant." Continuing to plant seeds of progress each day in our communities will help make a difference in our citizens' lives. Keep up the good work.

City leaders, from mayors to city clerks to human resource directors, gathered Dec. 9 at League HQ to hear the MHBF outlook for 2010.

Health and wellness seminar preps for 2010

By Andrew Morgan, League staff

he Municipal Health Benefit Fund (MHBF) had a strong 2009, League Executive Director and Plan Administrator Don Zimmerman told the 98 city leaders, speakers and League staff members attending the MHBF's health and wellness seminar, Dec. 9 at the League's North Little Rock headquarters. Zimmerman expressed also a positive outlook for the coming year, an exceptional prediction as we continue to struggle through a broad economic recession and deal with soaring healthcare costs.

"The program is running well," Zimmerman said, "probably the best its ever done."

The new year will see the program's member-ship grow by 500 employees. Some of the League's member cities and towns that in the last few years left the program seeking cheaper rates elsewhere are considering a return to the MHBF, Zimmerman said. While some program members will see an increase and some will see a decrease this year, the majority of participants will see their rates remain the same, and overall, the program will experience decrease in the monthly premium of $7,120.

On the national level, the League is keeping a close eye on the push in Congress for healthcare and insurance reform, Zimmerman said. Some of the proposed changes, including a broadening of Medicaid coverage, could potentially save the program and its members money, he said. Congress is even considering a co-op coverage model to increase availability and affordability of insurance. It's a model that resembles what Arkansas and other state Leagues are already following.

"Congress is catching up with what cities have been doing for a long time," Zimmerman said.

The MHBF has several changes in store for the new year, which League Assistant Director Pat Planek outlined for seminar attendees. MHBF will join a national network in 2010, making out-of-state care accessible for members, Planek said. The Fund will increase coverage for Well Child and Well Baby benefits. Adult wellness payments will also increase for 2010.

The Fund features a new hearing aid benefit this year, which covers $1,500 per ear once every three years.

Other changes for the year include a requirement for cities to establish criteria for retirees and a clarification in HIPPA disclosure forms.

In a recent survey of healthiness among states,

League Assistant Director Pat Planek covers the program's changes for 2010.

League Health and Safety Coordinator David Baxter encourages city leaders to improve quality of life, raise productivity and save money by establishing a wellness program.

Arkansas ranked 40th, League Assistant Director Ken Wasson noted. It's up from 50th, he said, but still too close to the bottom for comfort. Now entering its second year, the League's wellness department has as its goal to improve those numbers, starting with our city and town leaders and employees.

The League's recently published Wellness Guide defines our lifestyle risks and provides strategies for reducing them. Baxter encouraged attendees to return home and implement wellness strategies in the municipal workplace, to create local health and wellness programs. By creating a healthier workplace, he said, our cities and towns increase productivity and save money.

Municipalities must publish semiannual financial statements

The time is rapidly arriving for the semiannual reporting of each city's financial statement. Refer to the Handbook for Arkansas Municipal Officials, 2009-'10 ed. Section 14-59-116, pg. 615, and Section 14-237-113, pg. 872.

The first reference provides that the governing body of each municipality shall publish semiannually in a legal newspaper of general circulation in the municipality a FINANCIAL STATEMENT OF THE MUNICIPALITY by March 1 covering the final six months (July through the end of December) of the last calendar year.

The financial statements should include the receipts and expenditures for the six-month period and also a statement of the indebtedness and financial condition of the municipality.

The latter law, 14-237-113, provides a similar publication requirement for the operating authority of the WATER and SEWER DEPARTMENTS. Water and sewer departments administered by one or two commissions must comply with the law. If the water and sewer departments are administered by the city council, then it is the responsibility of the city council to comply with Section 14-237-113.

Summaries of attorney general opinions

Recent opinions that affect municipal government in Arkansas

From the Office of Attorney General Dustin McDaniel

Additional county tax must be distributed per capita

Opinion: 2009-168

Requestor: Shelby, Gene—State Representative

Request for reconsideration of Op. 2009-092, which concluded that enactment of a general sales tax pursuant to Subchapter 4 of ACA 26-74, requires any subsequently enacted sales tax to be shared among all cities within the county. RESPONSE: After reconsideration, the conclusion of Op. 2009-092 is confirmed. As long as Garland County continues to levy a one-half cent tax under the authority of 26-74-401-414, any additional sales tax must be distributed per capita, pursuant to 26-74-414. This effectively precludes a levy under 14-164-340 at this time because revenues from this "pay-as-you-go" capital improvement tax must be expended for the projects approved by the electorate. This necessarily means that the "pay-as-you-go" tax cannot be distributed per capita.

Defendants' fines double if ordinance passed by city and county

Opinion: 2009-172

Requestor: Faris, Steve—State Senator

Q1) Does ACA 16-17-129, as amended by Act 209 of 2009, have the net effect that cases on the "city docket" (see 16-17-707) will have imposed the additional $20.00 city jail fine and the additional $20.00 county jail fine? Q2) If so, will those defendants essentially be hit with the jail fine twice? Q3) Does the language "not to exceed twenty dollars ($20.00)" mean that, if a city or county passes an ordinance under this statute, it must be the specific amount of $20.00—no more or no less—or would it be permissible to pass an ordinance under this Code section in an amount less than $20.00? RE-SPONSE: Q1) Yes. If the city has also passed an ordinance pursuant to 16-17-129(a)(1)(A), then it seems clear that both the city-imposed fine and the county-imposed fine will apply in cases on the city docket. Q2) The defendant will be subject to two separate fines—one levied by the city and one by the county. Q3) The fine may be set in an amount less than, but not greater than, $20.00.

In-state "local" bidders shall have no advantage over in-state "non-local" bidders

Opinion: 2009-175

Requestor: Smith, Lindsley—State Representative Can the City of Fayetteville legally adopt a policy similar to ACA 11-19-259, or local purchasing preferences adopted in Madison, Wisconsin, such that: "If a local vendor submits a bid within 1% of the lowest non-local vendor, the purchase is awarded to that local vendor?" Q2) Can local vendors be "provided with a bonus equal to 5% of total available points" when a Request for Proposals is being considered? RESPONSE: Q1) Section 19-11-259 of the Code authorizes a political subdivision to allow preferences in bidding only to the advantage of instate bidders as opposed to out-of-state bidders, and only then when the proposed purchase is for commodities related to a public works project. Neither this statute nor any other statute authorizes a political subdivision to allow preferences in bidding to an in-state "local" bidder as opposed to an in-state "non-local" bidder. Accordingly, I believe the answer to this question is "no." Q2) To the extent that this question likewise deals with intrastate preferences in bidding, I believe the answer is likewise "no."

Driver of parked vehicle may text

Opinion: 2009-177

Requestor: Green, Rick—State Representative

In light of the provisions of Act 181 of 2009, prohibiting drivers of motor vehicles from using handheld wireless telephones to engage in text messaging, could a driver sitting in a parked car be cited as violating that Act? RE-SPONSE: Reading your question in full, it appears you are asking whether a person violates Act 181 of 2009 if the person is engaged in text messaging or accessing the Internet while sitting in a parked car with the engine turned off. In my opinion, Act 181 of 2009 probably does not prohibit such conduct.

Services may not be provided to city by corp. with conflict of interest

Opinion: 2009-178

Requestor: Broadway, Shane—State Senator

If a corporation is not owned by an alderman or council member, may services be provided by the corporation to a difference representing residents of western Arkansas."

The primary election for the seat will be contested on May 18.

Fayetteville offers information for new residents

Fayetteville is offering its citizens a way to help welcome new residents to the neighborhood, NWA Online has reported. "Good Neighbors in Fayetteville" is a flyer produced by the mayor's office that welcomes new residents to the city and offers practical information on the city's recycling program, noise ordinances and more.

"It will help new residents to become more cooperative to meet the needs of the neighborhood," said Julie McQuade, Fayetteville's community outreach coordinator. "It's so that when there are issues, it's a little easier to get things resolved."

The idea to draft the welcome letter and flyer was the result of discussions among residents, city planners, code enforcement officers, the mayor, the police department and McQuade's office.

the city pursuant to ACA 14-42-107(b)(2) which provides that the prohibition in ACA 14-42-107(b)(1) does not apply to corporations in which a controlling interest is held by stockholders who are not aldermen or council members? RESPONSE: For the reasons explained below, it is my opinion that the answer to your question is "no."

Charges allowed if FOIA compliance required

Opinion: 2009-186

Requestor: Threet, John—Pros. Att'y, 4th

Judicial District

Under ACA 25-19-109, may a public water-entity charge for personnel/contractor time spent responding to a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request to transfer paper records into an electronic medium? RESPONSE: Section 25-19-109 does not apply to the scenario you describe in your background facts. Thus, that statute is not authority for the contemplated charges. It is possible that another section of the FOIA—ACA 25-19-105(d)(3)(A)(i)—applies in this scenario, in which case the custodian might be authorized to charge for outside personnel time spent making the documents available as electronic data. But, as explained in the opinion, whether subsection 25-19-105(d)(3)(A)(i) applies depends on the threshold finding that the custodian is required to comply with this particular FOIA request. I cannot make this finding because it requires a factual determination. If a fact finder determines that the custodian is not obliged to comply with the request, but the custodian nevertheless decides to accommodate the requester, then, in my opinion, no provision of the FOIA enables the custodian to charge for either copying fees or personnel/contractor time.

Site of home determines vote

Opinion: 2009-187

Requestor: Williams, Bill—Chair, Benton Co.

Election Commission

What is the meaning of the term "domicile" as it is used in ACA 7-5-201, particularly in the instance when part of a homeowner's property lies in an area to be annexed but the property owner's home lies outside the area to be annexed? Q2) Is a voter eligible to vote as a resident of a city if the city's boundary line passes through the voter's residence? RESPONSE: Q1) If a voter's home lies in one district and the curtilage lies partly in another, regardless of whether an annexation is planned or has occurred, I believe the property owner is obliged to vote in the district in which his residence is located. Q2) I have found no authority addressing this question. Although it would seem logical that an individual whose home structure straddles two districts might choose the district in which he will vote, no provision of law declares as much. Legislative clarification is warranted.

You can't beat Mom's good advice

Those simple, profound lessons learned at Mother's knee remain relevant, even when applied to governing our cities and towns.

By Jim von Tungeln lizabeth Kolbert, writer for The New Yorker, recites some interesting historical facts in the magazine's Nov. 16, 2009, issue. Seems there were at least 150,000 horses—probably many more—living in New York City in 1880. A rough estimate of their droppings runs to at least 45,000 tons a month. It's no wonder then that the chief concern of urban planners at the first international convention in 1898, according to Kolbert, was "the manure situation."

Some things never change. Wading through the stuff still seems to be the hardest part of urban planning. This may be particularly true now when professional planning advice, often weird and contradictory, seems to be as pervasive as ... you get the idea.

Since I have been around longer than almost any-body, I have picked up a few tricks. But my best lessons remain those learned at my Mother's knee, rest her soul. So, as a new year begins, and we contemplate the recent season of good will and time spent with family, I offer the following simple ideas for dealing with planning issues during these perilous times. (These may or may not represent the views of the Arkansas Municipal League although I'm sure its leaders would have liked my Mom as much as I did.)

First: Cook from scratch.

Admit it. Weren't the best dishes you enjoyed over the holidays those from homemade recipes? I'm talking about the ones built on local ingredients and developed within a particular community.

The same is true of land-use regulations. I can't tell you how many times I have been met at the door of City Hall by a staff member or elected official with a problem and a foot deep stack of ordinances from cities across the country, all designed to address some problem. All we have to do is select the best and change the name of the city.

As Ernest Hemingway once said, "Isn't it pretty to think so?" The fact is that there is not another city in the world exactly like yours and that's what makes my job so wonderful. So let's solve our own problems given our particular resources and limitations. What's good for Vail, Colo., or Overland Park, Kan., may not be what is best for us.

Am I saying there is no value whatsoever in learning how other cities deal with issues? Absolutely not. It's good to have a strong understanding of municipal government. It's also good to review regulations from other cities to make sure we don't miss something. But when it's time to put the meal in the oven, let's trust ourselves.

Second: Dance with who "brung" you.

The married corollary to this is "Don't go chasing after hamburger when you have steak at home," advice that has served me well for nearly 38 years, anyway. I think what Mother meant was, don't go chasing after every new thing that pops up. And there are a lot of them popping up in the area of urban planning. Too many times we quit doing what has worked for our city and go chasing after the complete unknown.

Here's a weird observation. There are a number of Arkansas cities that have tripled or quadrupled their population since I started in the business. They have created stable governments, built magnificent park systems and served their people well. Invariably, instead of continuing to improve upon that successful pattern, they will call in a bunch of yahoos from some big east coast design firm whose principals will commence telling them how they have been doing everything wrong all these years. I don't mind. It's just funny, that's all.

Finally, and this was Mother's favorite: Don't get too big for your britches.

She would, in my case, accentuate this to the tune of a persimmon tree switch whistling through the air. In calmer times, she would say, "Always remember who you are." Now isn't this good advice for us as we head into a new year? I translate this to mean that our job is to continue to make great cities, not to undo a political rival or battle a neighboring community. That message sometimes gets lost in a time in which hate and anger seem to be the two hottest selling commodities in America. There are even some of us that believe our state will never be any greater than the condition of its most needy city. But that thought is from another teacher and for another day.

For now, I simply wish everyone could be paid to travel our state as I do. They would notice that hopes and aspirations are the same throughout its varied areas. So are our fears and misgivings. They would notice that good fortune is not always spread equally among our communities but also that good fortune is a fickle and mercurial mistress.

So as we head into this year, my hope is that we can get to know one another better. We can learn from each other how to wade through the "stuff" that confronts us every day, even without the horses. What better way could there be to do this than through the Arkansas Municipal League and by participating in its various functions?

At left: Many cities contain large natural areas that used to be considered wasted space. In this before and conceptual "after" shot, Maumelle's wetlands become a haven for birdwatchers and nature lovers.

Below: Maumelle's Veterans Memorial speaks volumes about the community itself.

As Mother used to say, "People ain't so bad once you get to know them."

Local businesses a key in disaster

The Southwest Regional Office of the Economic Development Administration (EDA) has developed strategies for businesses and local governments to work together to recover from natural disasters.

By Dr. Jim Feldt and Tonya Hass

city that recovers from a disaster but loses many of its businesses and industries is left in a severely disadvantaged position. The EDA provided a grant to the Institute for Economic Advancement to assess the impacts on businesses and industries of the 2008 natural disasters that affected so much of our state. Across the state, facilitated understanding sessions helped in describing the disasters, establishing the chronology of events and clarifying who did what to help their communities to recover. These session findings confirmed that the needs of business and industry, both pre-disaster and post-disaster, are often not addressed.

Following the understanding sessions, IEA focused on developing strategies that could help businesses and industries to prepare for recovery from natural disasters. Eight facilitated sessions were held, one in each of the Development Districts, at which municipalities were represented. IEA has completed an initial synthesis of the input from all eight of the Natural Disaster Recovery and Readiness Strategy Sessions.

These collaborative strategy-building sessions identified and prioritized the various ways in which the community leadership and local business and industry work together to prepare for and recover from disasters. Though IEA will be presenting the complete findings of this project through a series of programs over the next several months, the following are a sampling of the strategies realized, which would supplement the emergency planning and disaster recovery efforts that our counties and cities already perform.

Local and/or regional strategies to help business and industry prepare for disasters

Get the word out to businesses through local entities about the need for disaster planning and point them towards resources that can help them. Use the Chambers of Commerce, economic development entities, banks and utilities to raise the awareness of business owners and managers.

The local emergency management public officials should invite business and industry to become a part of the emergency planning process. If the community has a Local Emergency Planning Committee (LEPC) or a CERT (Community Emergency Response Team) Program, the business community should be encouraged to join and participate.

Revise materials that have been used to help families and organizations to plan for disasters to inform business and industry about priorities and how to plan.

Develop and enforce building codes to ensure that new structures are "disaster-worthy."

Local and/or regional strategies to help business and industry recover from disasters

Build into the local emergency response plan a "keep the money local (or within the region or state)" strategy. To the extent possible, plan to use local businesses in the recovery process as sources for supplies, equipment and contract work. In any RFPs, encourage outside firms to include sub-contracting to local firms.

Cities and counties should use their widest latitude to do what they have to do to clean up, ensure public safety and health, and re-establish normal order so that normal economic activity can resume. Local governments should be ready to suspend the rules and waive requirements for multiple bids.

Work with local colleges and other entities to operate a "business recovery center" at which local businesses can conduct some of their essential operations, such as filling out insurance claims and contacting suppliers. The Internet has become critical infrastructure for business and government operations. Ensure continuity of service and deploy portable wireless hot spots.

Ways that business and industry can help their communities recover from disasters

Serve as a source for skilled volunteers to assist with the recovery. Local business employees can be organized

The new 2009-2010 edition of the Handbook for Arkansas Municipal Officials has arrived. The Handbook compiles state laws affecting Arkansas municipalities, including the newest laws from the 2009 legislative session.

This is the most complete publication on municipal law and city government in Arkansas. You may order and pay for your copy online via Visa or MasterCard by visiting the Publications page at www.arml.org, or use the order form below.

prior to disasters and their skills, whether the skills are operating heavy equipment or administration and logistics, recorded so that they can be fully utilized during the recovery.

Arrange to provide supplies and equipment ahead of time. Emergency responders know that they are likely to be on their own for the first 48 to 72 hours. Make arrangements to purchase critical supplies from local businesses and for perishables that will have to be destroyed after the disaster to be donated for use at shelters.

Locally owned businesses can make the extra effort to serve their neighbors in their time of need. By developing a continuity of operations plan and creatively finding ways to conduct essential business without electric utilities, local businesses can help members of their communities at times when ATM machines do not work, etc.

Arkansas among world leaders in nanomedicine

Many Arkansans might be surprised to learn that some of the world's most innovative and game-changing nanotechnology research and development is being done right here in the Natural State.

By Vladimir Zharov, Ph.D.

t the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences, we've taken nanotechnology-based research and are applying it to medicine in ways that will eventually change how patients are treated while improving outcomes, reducing health care costs and undoubtedly saving lives.

What is nanomedicine?

Nanomedicine is an offshoot of nanotechnology, which generally involves the creation and use of materials and devices at the level of molecules and atoms, about one-billionth of a meter in size.

Nanotechnologists the world over are engaged in applying the science to engineering, physics, chemistry, biology and computer-related research and development. With hopes of creating superior chemicals, fuels, electronic devices and other inventions, scientists also are using the approach to answer complex medical questions, thus the emergence of nanomedicine.

"Nanomedicine is pushing UAMS and Arkansas to the front of elite worldwide institutions," said Michael Douglas, Ph.D., director of UAMS BioVentures. "Nanomedicine is already a growing industry with more than 200 companies investing several million dollars annually. We are extremely proud and lucky to have this work being done right here at UAMS."

Off and running

We began our work in 2000 when I came to UAMS with the goal of combining laser expertise with the blossoming new field of nanotechnology.

Our first idea was to use gold nanoparticles to kill cancer cells using a laser. Our team published its first paper in 2003 at about the same time institutions like Rice and Harvard were figuring out the early stages of fighting cancer with nanomedicine.

Cancer seemed like a logical place to start, considering the caliber of expert physicians and resources at UAMS. But in the long run, nanomedicine can and will be applied in all areas of medicine, from heart attacks and cardiovascular disease to healing wounds and infections.

Scientists and medical institutions around the globe have taken notice of our team's novel developments using magnetic and gold nanoparticles to detect, capture and kill cancer cells. Since then, our team has been awarded nearly $4 million in clinical nanomedicine-related grants that have led to our groundbreaking research being featured in several of the world's most prestigious medical publications.

How does it work?

The idea itself is relatively simple. First, inject a cocktail of magnetic and gold carbon nanotubes that have a special biological coating to target moving cancer cells in a cancer patient's blood. Second, use a simple magnet device on top of the skin to attract and capture the deadly metastatic cells. And finally, microsurgically remove the cells or eradicate them directly in the blood vessels with a non-invasive laser.

About 90 percent of all cancer deaths result from metastasis, which is when cancer cells shed from the primary tumor and develop secondary tumors within the body's distant organs. The development of methods for finding, counting and killing these potentially deadly metastatic cells in both the blood and lymphatic systems should be considered one of the top priorities in cancer research. The long-term goal of these methods is to improve the survival rate in cancer patients.

This revolutionary discovery gives many patients hope in earlier cancer diagnosis and better treatment. The nanomedicine-based approach to read and treat whole blood in the body with nanotechnology seems to be universal, with further development holding the promise for the diagnosis and treatment of many diseases, including infections or cardiovascular disorders to prevent stroke and heart attack.

Vladimir Zharov is Director, Phillip's Classic Laser and Nanomedicine Laboratory, Winthrop P. Rockefeller Cancer Institute, UAMS.

Resolve to take advantage of League services this year

From training opportunities, to legal aid, to grant writing assistance, the League has the tools to help your community reach its goals in 2010.

By Chad Gallagher

ith the beginning of a new year the air is full of fresh commitments, new resolutions and a long list of things to accomplish. It seems the tradition of new year resolutions has been around as long as the calendar has been turning to a new year. Unfortunately, most of these goals fade as the fervor of a new year turns into the monotony of the daily routine. The idea of achieving the goals slips further away from realization. A great idea is only the start of achievement. It must be followed by strategy and execution, both of which entail a great deal of labor. Many great ideas are never realized because a proper strategy to accomplish them is never developed. We want to help municipalities avoid this mistake in 2010.

As the new year begins it is important for municipalities to set specific goals, benchmarks and objectives for multi-year projects. Municipal leaders face the constant pressure of daily governing. Municipal services, employee management and finances all cause leaders to lose sight of the bigger picture. It is easy to become myopic, to settle into the comfort of daily routines. It's a scenario that replays itself over and over again. A leader neglects other areas because he is overly focused on one segment. It could be a former engineer focusing too heavily on operations, a former media person focusing primarily on message delivery, a former rescue worker focused mostly on emergency services. The scenario could play out a hundred different ways. The main issue is to be panoptic in sight and management.

To be panoptic in sight and management requires a continual evaluation of all components. It requires leaders to step back and look at the bigger picture on a regular basis. I grew up on a farm in Winthrop. It was a family farm run by my grandfather. One of the things I learned is that overlooking one small thing will negatively impact the whole. One blighted field with bad weeds will creep into the others, ruining or damaging your hay crop. One sick animal can quickly harm an entire herd or flock. Disease in one plant can quickly wipe out an entire row. The principle is true at every level of life. Failing to check all systems can cause the entire community to suffer.

The League understands that properly building and leading a municipality is not for the faint of heart. It is hard work. It requires long hours and true devotion. That's why the League has created so many great programs and initiatives designed not only to save municipalities money but to enhance your capacity as community leaders, strengthen your efforts and better serve your constituents. The League offers great opportunities for your city to save money through automobile and health insurance programs, legal defense programs and a variety of other cost saving measures. The League is considered a powerhouse at the state capitol. The League works diligently with state agencies, the governor and members of the Legislature on behalf of Arkansas municipalities. The League always has a seat at the table on major policy discussions and is highly respected in state government as professional, considerate but tough when it comes to protecting the interests of Arkansas cities and towns.

For example, the League is now working with UALR's Institute for Economic Advancement to provide support and assistance with economic development. The League also provides cities access to a staff planning consultant, Jim von Tungeln. Jim is respected across the country for his hard work, creative solutions and common sense approach. I personally think he's the best at what he does in the state. At no additional cost, members can access The Arkansas Grant Book, a complete database with detailed information on grants available to Arkansas cities and towns. Legacy Consulting is so pleased to partner with the League to provide assistance on community development, strategic planning and grant writing to members. Our basic services provide an annual site visit to members' communities and unlimited offsite support on development projects and grant writing.

It's a new year and it's a great year to strengthen your relationship with the Arkansas Municipal League. Visit the League's Web site, www.arml.org, and see all that your League does for you. Feel free to call us today to see how we can help you build a great city.

Chad Gallagher is principal of Legacy Consulting and a former mayor of DeQueen. Contact him at 501-580-6358 or by e-mail at chad.gallagher@legacyincorporated.com.

Nationally recognized.

Crews & Associates continues to grow at a record pace, and rates on many financing options are very attractive. Both of these facts are great news for our clients. In the past 5 years, we have participated as a managing underwriter for more than $11.2 billion of financings in 46 states across the country. Of that amount, $3.3 billion were Arkansas transactions. Translation: Our team of public finance experts at Crews & Associates continues to be a recognized leader in municipal finance, especially right here at home in Arkansas.

Again in 2008, our firm led the state in successfully managing the largest percentage of tax-exempt issues. During this same period, we also completed a majority of the financial advisory transactions for local school districts*. And while 2008 was a good year, we understand it was possible because of the trust and confidence shown by our fellow Arkansans.

At Stephens, we are continually impressed with the talent, dedication and loyalty of the men and women who manage and operate Arkansas' municipalities, school districts, hospitals, colleges and universities, state agencies, counties, utility systems and other governmental and community organizations.

Over the past 75 years, Stephens Inc. has been the market leader in this state. Thank you, Arkansas, for your continued confidence in our capabilities. For more information, visit our website at stephens.com.
